

21,000 Miles and Counting

By SAM WARD

Last summer my brother Ben (CIT '06) and I set off to thru-hike the length of the Pacific Crest Trail (PCT), a 2,650-mile footpath following the Sierra and Cascade mountain ranges from Mexico to the Canadian border. Along the way we would pass through 7 National Parks, 3 states, deserts, wildflowers, burn areas, raging mountain streams, lava fields, snow fields, and spectacular scenery. The trail would be entirely new territory for two boys from Maryland who had never set foot on the diverse West Coast landscape. However, we would be well equipped with valuable wilderness skills gained from many moons spent at Tohko. Perhaps the most essential to our success was something someone taught me my first week as a new camper in the Panther Clan: Suck it up.

The 2010/2011 snowfall on the West Coast set records for the high elevations occupied by the PCT, particularly Central California, aka the High Sierras. With over 660 inches on the season, storms as late as May dumping three feet of snow, and ski resorts open for 4th of July, many thru-hikers went around this section or got off the PCT entirely. For those of us that went for it, in Central California there was no trail in sight and getting lost became a daily or even hourly chore. For about 500 miles we were sliding down icy snow pack in the morning and slogging through heavy snow in the evenings, constantly debating which mountain pass we should be aiming for and wondering where the first place we could buy a GPS was. We made it through though; relying on so much of the knowledge, confidence, and fortitude gained from our summers in East Madison, and achieved our goal of a continuous border-to-border thru-hike of the PCT.

Ben is currently thru-hiking the 2,176-mile Appalachian Trail (AT) southbound with Leo Tannheimer (CIT '06) and a friend, Ian Wilson. Jake Mehlman (CIT '10) is expected to complete his northbound thru-hike of the AT in June of this year. Ten different Tohko Alumni have hiked a total of roughly 21,000 miles (and counting) continuously along one of the National Scenic Trails. The length of the Earth's equator is roughly 24,900 miles. Many hands make light work.

SUMMER 2012 CAMP UPDATE

Tohkomeupog opened for the 81st summer of Outdoor Adventure, Friendship and Opportunity on July 1, 2012. Our camper count is on par with last summer, and we're happy to report that again we will have 100% of our staff returning from prior summers in East Madison. We continue to struggle with recruiting Bear Clan aged campers and because of this we will have Bear aged campers joining the Deer Clan for five of the seven weeks. Stevo and Reid return as directors in the Deer and Panther Clans. Dan Bowers returns to the Wolf Clan after a season with the Bears. George Croft will handle sailing instruction and step out of director retirement to oversee the Bear Clan for two weeks. Don Barton is back as camp AD and John Sexton will continue as waterfront Director. Ken and John Peterson will be in charge of the Archery and Riflery ranges once again. Dawn Petersen will manage the office and store and Tim Folsom will oversee all the action on the tennis courts.
